POSTDOCTORAL RESEARCHER

SUMMARY

Early-career management researcher specializing in organizational behaviour, self-efficacy and technology adoption. Experienced in investigating how individual, organisational and social factors shape behaviour, engagement, workplace experiences and technology use, particularly in healthcare. Strong quantitative research capability with SPSS, AMOS and SmartPLS, including Structural Equation Modelling (SEM) based on research involving 420+ healthcare professionals. Co-inventor of a proposed four-layer framework that analyses metacognitive awareness and study habits among higher education students to identify factors associated with academic achievement and inform personalized learning support. Experienced in academic teaching, research mentoring, methodology training and evidence-based research, with interests in digital transformation, employee behaviour, professional experiences and healthcare management.

RESEARCH INTEREST

Management researcher with expertise in organizational behavior, technology adoption and healthcare management. Uses quantitative methods and Structural Equation Modelling to examine how individual and organizational factors shape EHR adoption, workplace experience and student learning.

- Organizational behavior, self-efficacy and employee outcomes
- Technology adoption and digital transformation, particularly EHR use in healthcare
- AI adoption and human-AI collaboration in healthcare, higher education and organizations, including responsible use and decision support
- Metacognitive awareness, study habits and academic achievement in higher education
- Healthcare management, workplace experience and patient safety

EARLY-CAREER RESEARCHER | RESEARCH FOCUS & METRICS

- Research Methods: Quantitative research, survey design, literature synthesis, research ethics and academic writing
- Research tools: SPSS, AMOS, SmartPLS, Structural Equation Modelling, CFA, EFA, Microsoft Office and Mendeley

RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Doctoral Research — EHR Adoption & Behavioural Intentions — Saveetha University, India | 2021–2026

- Designed and executed a quantitative study involving 420+ healthcare professionals across multi-specialty hospitals in Chennai to examine behavioural, organisational and psychological determinants of EHR adoption.
- Adopted a nine-construct SEM model using AMOS, integrating social influence, self-efficacy, performance expectancy, perceived usefulness, perceived risk and behavioural intention; reported model fit met the study thresholds (CFI > 0.95; RMSEA < 0.08).
- Translated findings into evidence-based recommendations to reduce digital adoption barriers and strengthen staff readiness for EHR implementation.
- Contributed to research ethics submissions and proposal development under Principal Investigator supervision.

- Mentored junior researchers in quantitative methods, AMOS-SEM and academic writing.
